Who Is Asha Day?

An engaging novel on how beliefs affect eternity

Dunwoody, GA – (Release Date TBD) – One bases his life and eternity on his ancestors’ beliefs, even if events and circumstances surrounding this happened millennia ago. Is this truth or are events and circumstances happening now more important? Author Pamela Bailey weaves an intriguing and compelling fiction that unveils the actions and views that could have led to what people perceive as reality today. With the release of her new book Shades of Gray – Who I Am, Bailey creates a hypothetical “what if” of a woman’s life – that changed her and the world.

Asha Day has just resigned. She is leaving her apartment and going home to her Mama. Moving away from this place is just the right thing to do. She doesn’t have a choice because people watch and follow her every move. She just could not live like this. She moved once because she could not eat in a restaurant without the workers putting strange things in her food. She could not answer the phone because of the obscene call she’s receiving. She could not go anywhere without a shadow. Circumstances are repeating. It’s just a matter of time before people would do something to really injure her physically. Everyday, she changes her realization on what’s real and reasonable because she doesn’t know anymore if she’s right about what’s real and what’s not. Why is this happening to her? Find out by accompanying her in this journey and meet the other people who share her reality. Follow her as she tries to understand what’s happening to her and those around her – and as everyone ultimately discovers the true meaning of life.

Shades of Gray – Who I Am is a compelling and stirring tale of Asha Day, whose journey to find truth and reality could bring significance to the world. Along the way, she meets people who help or hinder her in this journey; but these characters just reveal their own beliefs through the actions they portray. Unveil the real Asha through the pages of this engaging read. For more information on this book, log on to www.Xlibris.com.

About the Author

Although this is the first novel from Pamela E. Bailey, it is not the first book that she has written. Fiction is new for Bailey. She has a BS in Chemical Engineering from Georgia Institute of Technology and an MBA with a specialization in International Studies from Oklahoma State University. Over the years, she has authored many e-books on technical topics related to her work in Corporate America. After being downsized from an oil company in 1996, she has been on a quest to discover “what she wants to do when she grows up.” The author currently works as a manager at a bedding company. However, she dreams of working as a writer full time.
